1. "Here we will have to really think medico-legality. Why medico-legality? Because there were quite a few side effects that we said: 'OK, it exists, and there are reports, but still get vaccinated'. I mean, we have to think about how to write it and how to present it correctly"

2. "And that there won't be lawsuits after it (claiming that): 'Wait wait wait, you said that everything will pass and we can get vaccinated, and now look what happened to me, the side effects continues'."
3. "Also, the medico-legality aspect, before we rush on, Emilia, we need to think about it before we rush on."
4. The warning, in the recording revealed yesterday on the British GBN channel, is voiced by Prof. Mati Berkowitz,
5. who was chosen by the Israeli Ministry of Health to head a team of experts who evaluated the LESS SIGNIFICANT side effects following the covid vaccines, during a short period of time (6 months follow up), and only from 15% of the relevant population.
6. The study's findings are very worrying and point to new systematic prolonged side effects, some are not even listed in Pfizer's medical information documents;
7. Serious side effects - such as menstrual disorders, neurological injuries. And more - lasted in many cases weeks, months and even more than a year.
8. The most alarming point is the recurrence of the side effects in many cases after repeated doses - a phenomenon the researchers say establish causal relations to the vaccine.
9. "But I, I must say something about... Look, first of all again, one of the things that is significant here is the 're-challenge'. We know about medications that there is 'Naranjo classification' (the name of the ADR probability scale).

10. According to Naranjo, when there is a side effect that recures with re-challenge, it boosts it, and turns it from 'possible' (connection to the vaccine) to 'definitive'. 'meaningful'.

11. Despite those serious findings and the researchers concern, instead of stopping vaccine rollout - the Israeli MOH published a report claiming there's nothing new here, no new signal, everything was expected and insignificant - and meanwhile cleared the vaccine to babies
